Defining the Role of the Facilitation Company

The main responsibility of your medical travel facilitator is to ensure that the process of traveling for medical purposes is stress-free and is positive an experience as possible. The medical facilitator added the medical care travel planning component to their scope and responsibility and that value they add is in the relationship and peace of mind they develop with and for their patients and customers.

Your medical facilitator should provide personalized service to each and every one of their customers. The facilitator should understand their customer and recognize their medical and travel needs and preferences. Today with all the impersonal and poor customer service, medical travelers should appreciate the reliability and attention to detail a professional facilitator will bring to the entire medical travel experience.

Factors that Contribute to Medical Travel

Medical tourism is defined as the process in which patients seek health care abroad. Healthcare services may range from dental procedures to bariatric surgeries to IVF procedures, to cosmetic procedures. It is a rapidly growing phenomenon spurred on by patients searching for quality, affordability, availability, and accessibility in healthcare.

Medical travelers are now able to find outside of traditional healthcare models an adequate, cost effective solution to their medical needs avoiding the rising costs of Healthcare and the recognition of cross-border medical tourism.

Choosing an IPF Medical Tourism Facilitator Professional

A Medical Tourism Facilitator serves as an intermediary or primary point of contact between patients and health care providers. It is advisable you choose a facilitator who is Internationally Recognized and Incorporated such as International Patient Facilitators Mexico Inc.

The role of a medical tourism facilitator is two-fold:

- 1/ Educate potential patients about the various medical facilities and physicians available taking into consideration their needs and expectations.
- 2/ Manage the flow of information and coordination of services between patients and health care providers due to their well-established business alliances.
